

Gay gift ideas for the holidays

Jim Gladstone

Whether you're looking for tunes, booze, wearables, edibles or even insertables, remember to support queer and LGBTQ-friendly makers and vendors in your quest for the perfect holiday gifts this year. Here are a few suggestions to help make your holidays gay.

Toasting the Season

Wine from Gentleman Farmer

Another enterprising couple, Joe Wolosz and Jeff Durham, are the minds behind Gentleman Farmer, a winery and burgeoning lifestyle brand based in Napa. Hospitality industry veterans, the pair began experimenting with wine-making back in 1999 and today remain an intimate, hands-on operation, producing under 1000 cases a year, much of which is sold through their wine club.

Keeping their operation a bit under the radar until recently, the couple built relationships with high-end wine country tour operators, who would bring lucky guests to Wolosz and Durham's Yountville home for tastings accompanied by spectacular food pairings cooked up by Wolosz (who is working on a Gentleman Farmer cookbook).

This spring, they'll open a unique bungalow headquarters in downtown Napa with tastings for the general public and invitation-only events for club members. Memberships and a limited range of individual bottles –including their distinctively dry 2021 Rosé blend of pinot noir, merlot and pinot meunier; awarded 90 points by "Wine Spectator"— are available for holiday giving.

www.gentlemanfarmerwines.com