

Wine Time! The Best Wines to Enjoy this Spring

Joey Amato

Every now and then, I like to write an article about wine. Not only do I love drinking wine, but I love learning about it. Wine is truly fascinating. There are so many things to know about wine, people spend a lifetime studying it. And of course, some people choose a career in wine. While I don't think I have the nose for that, I do enjoy savoring a lovely wine every now and then, especially with friends. I recently started reading a book called Cork Dork and a small group of friends in Indy began using that book as a guide. We want to meet regularly and discuss wine as well as pair it with some wonderful food items.

If you are planning a wine soiree, here are some wines which will accompany almost everything on your menu.

2021 Gentleman Farmer Napa Valley Rosé (SRP: $37) - 100% Pinot Noir, white strawberry, ruby red grapefruit, red cherry, and white peach aromas lead to watermelon, white tea, and brioche. Dry and crisp, bright acidity and a pleasant bitterness of grapefruit pith lingers on the finish.

2020 Gentleman Farmer Napa Valley Chardonnay (SRP: $49) - Sourced from the famed Muir-Hanna vineyard, bright acidity and purity of fruit burst with Meyer lemon and dried apricot, aromas of honeysuckle, roasted Italian meringue, and vanilla, and a generous, creamy texture.

2019 Gentleman Farmer Napa Valley Red Wine (SRP: $77) - 93% Merlot and 7% Cabernet Sauvignon, an initial impression of red currant and wild red cherry give way to Bing cherry, pie cherries, cola, and black currant leaf.
